A: My solution to create the image from a template was to use the ImageMagick convert command line program.

There are a few options for what you can do with the output that you need. For example I created an image at 600x400 pixels and 100kb in size and reduced the transparency of the overlay to something along the lines of 25% convert template.jpg -background black -gravity center -geometry 600x400+100 -alpha 25 -quality 80 output.jpg The -alpha 25 just changes the transparency, and the -quality 80 sets the quality for output files. You can go higher than this to reduce the file size as much as possible.

Q: How to parse an.exe file? I'm trying to parse an.exe file. The file is just a short list of lines, each line has a "n" number and a value: 0|2|11|0|1|3|1|1|1|1|1|3|0|0|0|0|0|1|0|2|0|1|0|0|0|0|0|2|1 For each line I need to take the first number, double it and then add all the numbers together and return the result. Can someone help me out with the code please?

import re
numbers = re.compile(re.compile("^0|1|2|3|4|5|6|7|8|9|1|2|3|4|5|6|7|8|9$"))
filename = raw_input("Input the file name: ")
f = open(filename,"r")
for i in f:
    match = numbers.search(i)
    return match.group() * 2

A: I'd use re.match and re.sub to get the number, and then use sum to add up all the numbers, like this:

import re
filename = raw_input("Input the file name: ")
numbers = re.compile(r"^0|1|2|3|4|5|6|7|8|9$")
with open(filename) as f:
    numbers_match = numbers.match(f.read())
    if
```
